Aim of the Conference

The Conference will provide a forum for scientists and experts in the field of vulnerability of cultural heritage to natural and technological hazards field in order to improve and update information about scientific achievements and policy in risk management. Dodecanese islands are the appropriate locations to discuss risk assessment and remedy strategies of the cultural heritage and for the expression of intra-European cooperation and exchanges between Europe and the other continents, because of its multiethnic and millenary culture.

Date and place

The event will take place on 3-5 October 2005, at KICC (Kos International Convention Center), Island of Kos, Greece.

Scientific Program

Every work-session will be organised with keynote lectures, critical presentation of the papers by the session co-ordinator, oral presentation of papers presented by the participants, debates and poster sessions. An international scientific committee will audit and select the papers.
